Nominee Biographies:

Kim Dreslin

Kim Dreslin Kim is currently an anesthesiologist at North Country Hospital, in Newport, VT where she is responsible for putting patients at ease prior to surgery, and making sure they wake up too. Kim, her physician-husband Andrew and 3 daughters enthusiastically moved to Stowe in 2015. Having grown up in the bucolic small town of Andalusia, Alabama where you never meet a stranger, Kim has always been passionate about nature, animals and art. When not at the hospital with patients, Kim and her family enjoy playing tennis, cycling and creating culinary adventures. Kim is shedding her 'southerner-on-skis' roots and actively becoming a skiing enthusiast through her daughters and her husband, who grew up skiing Mount Mansfield. Kim is grateful to be a part of the Stowe community and looks forward to ways she can support and celebrate Stowe's artistic community.

Greg Popa

Greg Popa is publisher of the Vermont Community Newspaper Group, a group of six weekly newspapers, including The Stowe Reporter, Waterbury Record, News & Citizen in Morrisville, The Other Paper of South Burlington, The Citizen of Charlotte and Hinesburg, and Shelburne News. He also publishes and edits the Stowe Guide & Magazine. Born and raised in Ohio, Greg moved to the Northeast after graduation from the University of Akron, first settling on Mount Desert Island, where he spent summers, and later migrated west to Vermont. He's worked off and on for the newspaper company since 1986, holding just about every job at the community journalism level, from paperboy to publisher. Greg, who lives on a small farm in Bakersfield with two dogs, a cat and some elderly chickens, appreciates the combination of quiet at home and the bustle of Stowe.

Molly Triffin

Molly Triffin is a freelancer who currently lives in Stowe with her husband. Between snowshoes alongside her dog and children, she writes for magazines and websites about everything from women's lifestyle topics to parenting to careers. But she didn't always live in fleece jackets and Sorels. Before her move, she was based in NY, where she served as the features director at Cosmopolitan. In addition to writing and editing for the magazine, she oversaw special projects and events, including Cosmo's campaign against sexual assault on college campuses and the award-winning Practice Safe Sun campaign, and authored two books. She graduated magna cum laude from Georgetown University with a double major in English and French, and later attended the Columbia Publishing Course. Although prose is the fulcrum of Molly's artistic fervor, she also has a life-long love for the visual realm: Her parents own a furniture store in her hometown of New Haven, CT, part of which is a gallery featuring local artists that Molly helps out with. She also volunteered for the nonprofit "Free Arts NYC," which delivers art programs for inner city kids.
